Very strong performance in FY 2005

A few weeks following FY 2005 revenues' announcement, Groupe Sporever today released highly improved earnings, that range at the high end of July 2005 I.P.O. guidance.

This very positive trend, which should carry on in the upcoming years, is mainly due to the Company's growing new media business (internet and wireless operations) which now account for 45% of total revenues (versus 35% at the end of 2004).

All business segments contributed to the Company's positive operating performance, including the print business (But ! newspaper) which allows Sporever to benefit from numerous editorial and promotional synergies that enhance its quality coverage of events across its media properties.

Favorable outlook for the next three years

Thanks to its position as a leader in the Sports' new media marketplace, Sporever should continue to grow aggressively thanks to:

- An explosive growth of the internet and wireless markets, fostered by increased penetration of broadband networks,
- A strategic alliance with Orange France, the mobile rights' holder of most of the European sporting events, and whose exclusive contract with French League 1 soccer has just been renewed until 2008,
- A unique sporting calendar of events from 2006 to 2008. Although 2007 is an odd year that usually provides few first class events, it will trigger excitement and generate exceptional action for fans with the Rugby World Cup to be held in France.
- International expansion: the Torino Olympic Games allowed the Company to demonstrate its know-how in the multilingual coverage of major events for wireless consumers (more than 600 hours were produced for 5 wireless operators in 6 different languages).

Groupe Sporever is the leading new media company in France dedicated to meeting the needs of the sports' fans, anytime, anywhere. Among its properties, the Company owns and operates the country's n°1 soccer site, Football365.fr, and a leading multisports' site, Sport365.fr. Groupe Sporever is listed on the Alternext market of the Paris Stock Exchange (code ALSPO).
